From six miles east of the Truckee Pass of the Cal. Mts. the Reed's party in November 1846 descended snow to the foot of the first and last the party reached Emigrant's mountain snow should at one point to cross valley or the mouth of Truckee River and under there or in the southern descent of these mountains is the line of the California Mountains. The western descent of these mountains is the most rugged and difficult portion of the whole journey.

On this drive a party should go on in advance with and collect the water of the falling springs in order to cool
